EDINBURGH, May 16.

Amongst other Particulars of the late Battle near Tournay, it is in many Letters said, that the Duke having ordered some Dutch and English Battalions, to support the brave Highlanders, when hotly engaged in the French Trenches, they refused to obey his Royal Highness's Order; the Dutch General had already received his Deserts, being shot to Death, and Ingoldsby is soon like to meet with the same Punishment. — Poor indeed for the Loss of such a Number of brave Men, and probably a compleat Victory, had they attacked the Enemy.

The Duke was twice in the French Entrenchments

Vienna, April 21. N.S.

AFTER the Rencounter of Issyvock the Bavarian and Hessian Troops were scarce retir'd by the Way of Freysing towards Munich, but it Excellency Count Bathiani, General and Commander in Chief, advanc'd the 13th from Landshut to the said Issyvick with his whole Army, and having learn'd there that a Corps of French Troops, under the Command of General Segur, were assembling near Pfeffenhoven, with the Palatine Troops of Neuburg, under the Command of General Zastrow, and that they were to join themselves to the Bavarians and Hessians, his Excellency General Bathiani, with a Design to hinder that Junction, took all possible Precautions to conceal his real Intention, and to prevent the Enemy's perceiving which Side he should turn to. In this View he march'd the 14th along the Amber towards Kirkdorf, and, to make the Enemy believe that our Design was against the Bavarians, we detach'd a Body of the advanc'd Guard on the Right towards Purk, and another towards Dachaw, but the 15th we turned, the whole Army, towards the French and Palatine Troops at Pfeffenhoven, who were reach'd the same Day by the Avant Guard commanded by Lieutenant General Field Marshal Count Mercy, the Generals Paisi and Sebottendorf; the latter, with 40 Horse of the said advanc'd Guard, immediately attack'd the Enemy, who was posted without the City, and obliged him to retire into it, and as the Infantry could not come up quick enough, he made 200 Dragoons dismount, with whom he advanc'd to the Gates, which were cut through with the Hatchets by the said Dragoons. During this Interval the rest of the Avant Guard also arriv'd, and set about pursuing the Enemy from one Eminence to another, 'till the whole Army arriv'd; but, when that happen'd, the whole Corps of them was obliged absolutely to retire in the greatest Haste, and we did not cease pursuing them 'till Night, a good Way beyond the River Baar, behind which they thought to be in Security, because there were no Bridges; but as the Horse was always close at their Heels, and as the Foot crossed the said River with the Water up to their Middles, there was nothing but the Night which favour'd this last Retreat. According to some Reports the French and Palatines have passed the Rats and the Loch, and a Part of the Bavarians and Hessians have turned towards Fridberg, and the other Part towards Landsperg. We cannot give at present a just Account of the Enemy' Loss, because he was pursu'd chiefly through Forests, and we consequently cannot know, with any Certainty, the Numbers that were dispers'd and killed of them; but it is very sure he has lost upwards of 2000 Men, as well in Killed, Wounded, and Prisoners, as in Deserters. Gen. Ripplemonds is of the Slain, and General Zastrow the Wounded. Very few or none at all would have escaped, if they had not made their Retreat through Forests from Hill to Hill, with extraordinary Speed, so that our Infantry could never reach them, and if the Night had not separated us What is most surprising is, that we had but six Men killed, and 28 Men and 10 Horses wounded We have made our selves Masters of all the Enemy's Baggage, of nine Piece of Cannon, with all the Ammunition Waggons. We are still employ'd in searching the Forests for more Artillery, which is thought to be concealed there, because some Deserters say the Enemy has saved four Cannon, and others two, but others affirm that they have saved none.
